Dan Strotman, a Vice President with Orr Partners, recently went back to school. Way back to the 3rd grade at Garfield Elementary School in Fairfax County. Dan was asked to talk with third graders about how he uses math in his work every day. “It’s great to interact with kids this age,” said Dan. “I was really amazed by their curiosity and interest in engineering. We spent two hours together and it was non-stop questions.” Dan’s presentation included a discussion on area and perimeter followed by some photographs of his past and present projects.

“We encourage all of our staff to make these types of connections with our community,” stated Scott Siegel, President of Orr Partners. “Those of us who have made similar presentations understand how rewarding and fulfilling they are for us and the children.”
